Even though we learn more & more each day, it becomes less and less distinct from the rest of our experiences. We've adjusted to Jamaican life. At least to where the surroundings & people aren't a constant surprize. Perhaps it is just due to the constant assault of our new experiences. We're just overloaded.

The training routine has become somewhat tedious. Some of the info is new. Some I've seen before. Combine that with anxiety about getting "in country" and you have a general restlessness.
